Assessments

The evaluation of student performance throughout the academic year is conducted through a combination of formative and summative assessments. Formative assessments, such as in-class questions and quizzes, are used to assess student understanding and progress on a regular basis. These assessments allow for timely feedback and adjustments to instruction to ensure that students are keeping pace with the material being covered. Additionally, summative assessments are conducted at the end of the program in the form of optional exams. These exams serve as a comprehensive evaluation of student mastery of the material covered during the term and provide a final evaluation of student performance for that term. The results of these assessments are used to determine students' final grades and provide feedback to students on areas where they may need to improve or where they have excelled. This approach to assessment allows for the monitoring of student progress throughout the academic year and ensures that students are meeting the program's learning objectives.
