

Diploma in Islamic Studies

Overview

The Diploma in Islamic Studies is a specialised curriculum designed to impart foundational knowledge of Islam and its related disciplines to students. The program encompasses the core sciences of Islamic theology, jurisprudence, purification, Hadith, exegesis, and Islamic history. The curriculum is structured to enhance students' competency and proficiency in comprehending Islam and its key sciences. Through this program, students acquire the necessary knowledge to practise their religion and share it with others, such as their family members and colleagues.

Structure

The Diploma in Islamic Studies is a three-year, part-time program that adheres to an academic calendar, commencing in September and ending in July. The program is divided into three terms: the first term from September to December, the second from January to Ramadan, and the third from post-Ramadan to July. Classes are conducted entirely online through our e-learning portal, to which students are granted access upon registration. Classes are held two days per week, with each class session lasting for two hours, for a total of four hours per week. In addition to the scheduled contact hours, students are expected to allocate a minimum of 2-4 hours per week to preparation and revision.

Assessments

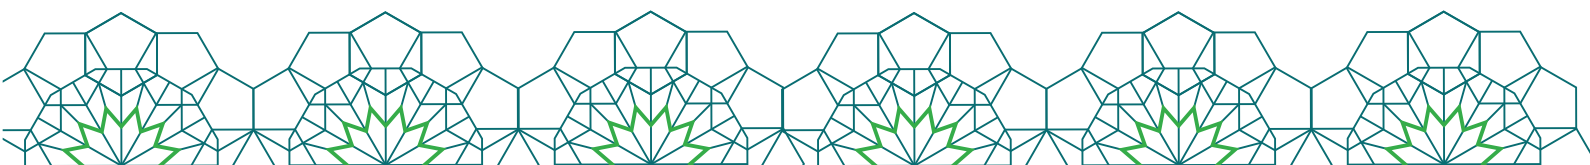

The evaluation of student performance throughout the academic year is conducted through a combination of formative and summative assessments. Formative assessments, such as in-class questions and quizzes, are used to assess student understanding and progress on a regular basis. These assessments allow for timely feedback and adjustments to instruction to ensure that students are keeping pace with the material being covered. Additionally, summative assessments are conducted at the end of each term in the form of optional exams. These exams serve as a comprehensive evaluation of student mastery of the material covered during the term and provide a final evaluation of student performance for that term. The results of these assessments are used to determine students' final grades and provide feedback to students on areas where they may need to improve or where they have excelled. This approach to assessment allows for the monitoring of student progress throughout the academic year and ensures that students are meeting the program's learning objectives.
